Writing that Transports

Evocative Description

- REDUNDANCIES
  - says the obvious, either something already stated or something any intelligent reader could assume

Example:

- She gets her information from different books and articles that she has read on the different insecticides.
- It was an unexpected surprise when a pair of baby twins was born at 12 midnight

Correct:

She gets her insecticide information from books and articles.

It was a surprise when the twins were born at midnight.
